DESCRIPTION

The Division of Abdominal Imaging and Intervention at Harvard Medical School (Brigham and Women's Hospital) offers a five-day Visiting Fellowship training program in Abdominal Imaging and Intervention. This program is designed to expose the participant to a wide range of abdominal and pelvic CT scans, MRI exams, and interventional radiology procedures, including radiofrequency- and cryo-ablations. The Program curriculum includes participating in daily read-out sessions and observing interventional radiology procedures. In addition, daily case-based presentations by the Faculty, technical demonstrations, and informal discussions solidify the learning experience. An electronic teaching file and videotape library encompassing over 50 lectures is available for review.

OBJECTIVES

To expose Visiting Fellows to a wide variety of abdominal and pelvic CT scans, MRI exams and interventional procedures. Special imaging exams include endorectal MRI, secretin-enhanced MRCP, CT colonography, CT enterography, and CT urography. Interventional radiology procedures performed at the Division of Abdominal Imaging and Intervention include fine needle aspiration biopsy, large needle (core) biopsy, catheter drainage of fluid collections, image-guided para- and thoracocentesis, and radiofrequency ablation and cryoablation of all organ systems including organs of the abdomen, pelvis, lung, and bone.

FACILITIES

Brigham and Women's Hospital, a world leader in patient care, medical education, and research, is consistently named to US News and World Report's Honor Roll of top ten hospitals. It is one of the finest hospitals in the city of Boston and the surrounding area, and is a major teaching hospital of Harvard Medical School and a world-renowned center for advanced patient care — and known for our pioneering work in virtually every area of medicine. Approximately 385,000 imaging studies are completed annually in the Department of Radiology. State-of-the-art equipment, including 64-multidetector-row CT scanners, 1.5 Tesla and 3 Tesla MR platforms, multidetector-row PET/CT scanners, and interventional CT-fluoroscopy and open-MR suites are routinely used for data acquisition and guidance of interventional procedures.
