Virtual Colonoscopy
Two-Day Minicourse

Virtual Colonoscopy is a new developing technique providing an alternative method of screening for colorectal cancer and precursor lesions (polyps). Since this is a new technology, few radiologists, technologists or gastroenterologists have experience in the understanding, performance, or interpretation of these studies. This two-day minicourse is intended to provide a means to educate radiologists, gastroenterologists, and technologists in the current state of the art in virtual colonography (CT colonography).

This two-day structured minicourse includes:
- Didactic lectures
- Demonstrations and tutorials on Viatronix workstations
- Review of cases from our pathology-proven database

COURSE OBJECTIVES

At the conclusion of this fellowship, participants will be able to:
- Describe the current state of the art of virtual colonoscopy
- Discuss the issues related to colorectal cancer screening and the impact of this new modality
- Acquire skills necessary to perform and interpret virtual colonoscopy
- Identify the advantages and disadvantages of the current available workstations, virtual colonoscopy software and preparation kits
